Dear Grandma,

How's everything in Taipei, Grandma? Recently, I have been so sentimental that I often feel glad that I'm about to be an undergraduate but later I am depressed that the parting of my bosom friends and I is around the corner, which is extremely hard to face. Alright, let's cut to the chase! Yesterday, I just received the gift you sent to me. No sooner had I opened the envelop and looked at it that I thoroughly went into ecstasy. Inside the envelop lay a plane ticket to New York. That is to say, I'm about to travel to New York by myself. How do you know I have always wanted to go there? So astonished am I that I fail to utter a syllable. I am just deeply appreciative of your huge present. It means a lot to me. Furthermore, thanks for giving me a chance to be independent and take responsibility for myself abroad which are really what I need after graduating. It is certain that I will definitely have a whale of a time there and this journey will make my life turn into a new chapter without fail. I don't know how to describe my delight and excitement but just thank you Grandma. I love you so much!

Eventually, I want to invite you to attend my graduation ceremony on June 11 at Yangmei Senior High School. But, you have no choice but to accept my invitation because you are one of my lovely people in my life. You have to know that your attendance is of paramount importance to me so I'm looking forward to your coming!

Sincerely,

Jamie
