A Helpful Wish

I am a dog lover. If I could make a helpful wish to help stray dogs which are desperately in need, it would be perfect. A dog is supposed to be one of the human best friends. Royal and tame, dogs will do us no harm but provide us with their heart-warming companionship. However, there are some people with little sense of responsibility abandon their dogs without mercy. Little do they know that as soon as a dog is caught and send to an animal shelter, its destiny is doomed. It is hardly possible for dogs to be alive after twelve days while they are taken to the animal shelter. The consequence is too brutal for those fluffy pets to take as they have no idea what they are going to face.

Feeling frustrated and disappointed, I wish I could do something to give these helpless dogs a hand. I would provide them a place to wait for another adoption instead of a shelter with poor sanitary environment. Also, I would set a limit to the number of people who want to have dogs. By doing so, the number of stray dogs wandering on the streets would reduce to a minimum. Last but not the least, I would make every effort to educate people how to take care of their dogs properly and tell them dogs consider their owners important. All in all, I do hope that people will eventually take this issue seriously.
