My Goals for My Life

I think the most valuable thing in life is to live with goals. Everyone should have some goals or dreams; otherwise, what is the meaning of life? First, I will challenge myself to get the certificates of GEPT (General English Proficiency Test) Advanced Level, TOEFL at score 116, IELTS at band 8, GRE at score 335, and translation and interpretation from the ministry of education to get myself well-prepared for the capricious and competitive society. I am infatuated with language especially English and French (I will take courses of French as my second foreign language in college), hence it is irreproachable to make a living as an interpreter, translator and English supplementary school teacher because it is consistent with my inchoate objective. In addition, I am yearn for helping the penurious children living in backwater or bucolic areas. From my perspective, they deserve the rights of education to adapt to the world, so it is high time we took actions promptly. Second, visiting Korea is the first priority after I start to make money by myself owing to my favorite, EXO, whom I am intoxicated with, and the relishing cultural objects and historic sites. I am fully convinced that my life isn't complete without paying a visit to Korea. Finally, a life without goals is meaningless. We are always disturbed by mundane and trifling things, and we work or study assiduously only to find it lamentable for missing the dream and the fervor for life. The goal, an invisible but invaluable seed in your mind, is absolutely worth your dedicating and fulfilling. No vacillation! From now on, it is your debut to live out the iridescent life.
